THE FIGHTING RANGER

Adventure Picture - "The Lost Fortune"

Reel 1

John Marshall, a college-bred young man, is the hero of the picture. He is a member of the "Knights of the Round Table" and is known for his bravery and chivalry. In this picture, he is called upon to defend a dam which is being threatened by a band of robbers. The dam is the only source of water for the town and its destruction would mean the end of the town. Marshall, with the help of his friends, fights the robbers and saves the dam.

Adventure Picture - "The Lost Fortune"

* * *

John Marshall, a cattleman on trial for murder, awaits the return of Terence O'Rourke with a fortune for his defence. O'Rourke, who has been robbed of the money on the road, now speeds to the courtroom but is caught in a dam burst and Marshall is convicted and sentenced.

O'Rourke arrives just in time to be accused of theft by "Topaz" Taggart, who poses as Marshall's friend but is the perpetrator of all the villainy, being determined to possess Marshall's ranch and Marshall's daughter, who is in love with O'Rourke and still believes in him in spite of his loss of the fortune.

O'Rourke escapes from the courtroom and rides with Mary to stop payment on a check and save the fortune. But Stella Montrose, an adventuress in league with Taggart, has forged Mary's signature and walked off with the cash.

Knowing that O'Rourke will be able to prove that Mary did not cash her own check, Taggart sends a band of desperadoes to do away with him. O'Rourke and the girl are abetted by three friendly Indians when they clash with the roughs and roll down a great embankment.
